

FilmLight and HS-ART offer new integrated grading and film restoration workflow

The Baselight-DIAMANT combination is already being used successfully at Czech TV

5 September 2016

HS-ART and FilmLight have been working together to jointly offer FilmLight's Baselight colour grading system and HS-ART's DIAMANT-Film restoration software as a complete, fully integrated workflow for digital cinema restoration.

Initial restoration projects for movies and TV programs have already led public broadcaster Czech Television in Prague to successfully use this unique combination, which brings together the efficiencies and the power of the Baselight and integrate these directly with DIAMANT-Film.

Czech Television has three Baselight suites in its finishing operations and three DIAMANT-Film Restoration suites. "The combination of DIAMANT-Film Restoration software and the Baselight grading system is improving our restoration workflow and considerably increasing our productivity," said David Carda, the support engineer in charge of the restoration department of Czech Television.

The integration allows browsing of the Baselight projects structure using the DIAMANT-Film Restoration importer, and from there, to import media directly into DIAMANT-Film Restoration. The scene cut information and other project metadata can be shared between the systems while grading and restoration can be handled simultaneously in parallel.

"Baselight and DIAMANT-Film have come together to produce a collaborative workflow that allows post houses, broadcasters, film archives and laboratories to conduct the highest quality restoration projects with unprecedented efficiency," said FilmLight Director Steve Chapman.

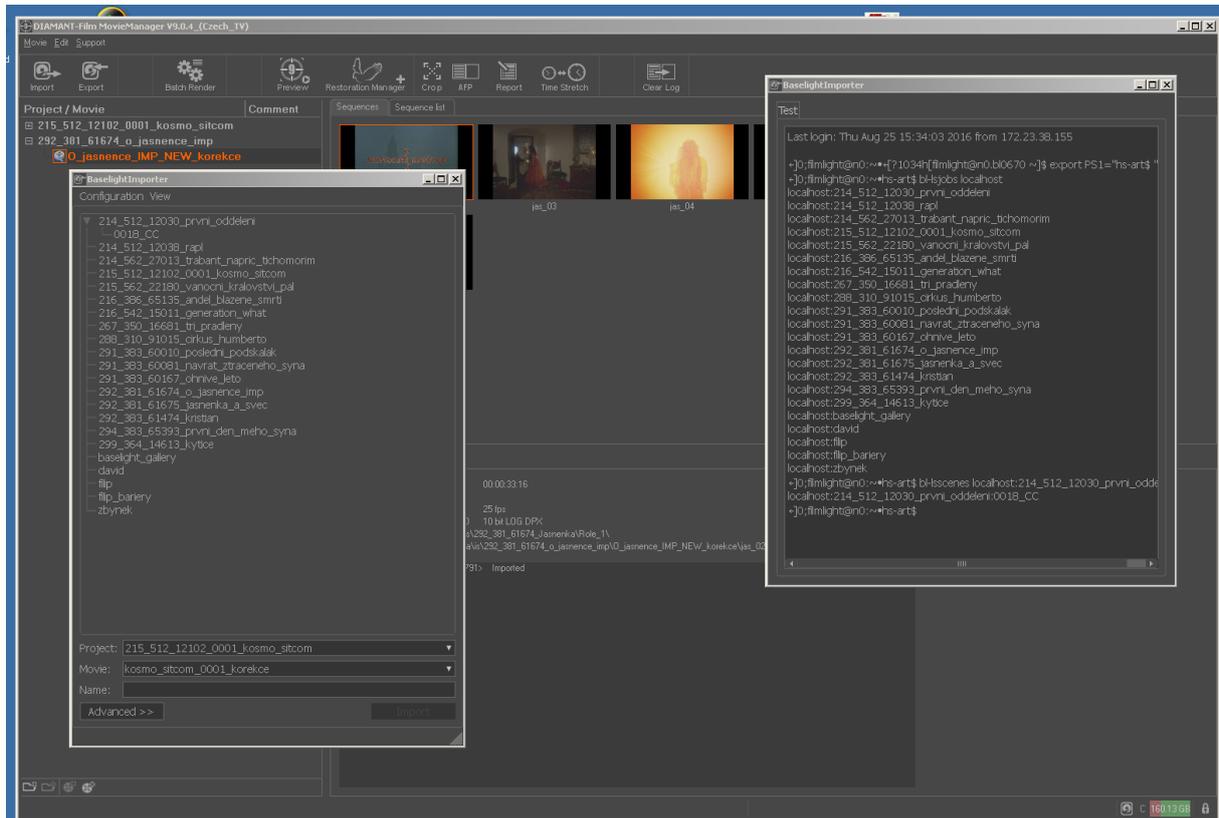

DIAMANT-Film and Baselight will be demonstrated at IBC 2016 on the FilmLight stand 7.F31 and the HS-ART stand 5.C41.
